Track 2: Symposium on Achieving Youth Specific SDGs

The Symposium will follow the below-mentioned methodology:

- It will be a frontal and interactive symposium where morning sessions will introduce the core issue of the workshop through panel presentation by experts, which will facilitate background setting for breakout sessions. Interactive sessions in the afternoon aim to discuss and design possible structure and content of proposed policy briefs.
- The symposium will begin with plenary sessions by lead experts in the thematic areas identified, which will be followed by comments/observations from experts and open discussions.
- Each breakout session will be coordinated by an expert in respective thematic areas. The discussions in the breakout sessions will be focusing on the structure and content of policy briefs to be developed post-workshop.
- The guiding questions to be discussed in the breakout sessions will be developed by a team in consultation with experts. The guiding questions will be indicative in nature and the group members are free to add/ modify guiding questions.
- In each of the Breakout sessions, the participants will be provided 4-6 leading questions to deliberate and come up with 5-6 key points on each of the questions. The Chair/Co-chair will then present the groups' perspective at the plenary.

The intended outcomes of the symposium are given below:

- It is planned to develop policy briefs in selected thematic areas by a team comprising experts working in the respective thematic areas. The teams will be led by renowned experts from the representing countries.
- The proposed policy briefs will highlight the urgency of the problem and the need of action in proposed thematic areas, which will serve as an impetus for future course of action.

B. About Rajiv Gandhi National Institute of Youth Development (RGNIYD)

Rajiv Gandhi National Institute of Youth Development (RGNIYD), Sriperumbudur, Tamil Nadu, is an Institution of National Importance by the Act of Parliament No. 35/2012 under the Ministry of Youth Affairs & Sports, Government of India. The RGNIYD was set up in 1993 under the Societies Registration Act, XXVII of 1975.

As the apex national agency for youth development, the Institute strives to develop into a globally recognised and acclaimed centre of academic excellence in the field of youth development, fully responsive to the national agenda for inclusive growth, and the needs and aspirations of young people of the country to realise their potentials to create a just society.

RGNIYD serves as a youth observatory and depository in the country thereby embarking on youth surveillance on youth-related issues. It has a wide network with various organizations working for the welfare and development of young people and serves as a mentor.

RGNIYD functions as a think-tank and vital resource centre of youth-related activities for youth development in India. It also engages in seminal research in the vital areas of youth development and coordinates Training Programmes for state agencies and the officials of youth organisation, besides the Extension and Outreach initiatives across the country.

As the apex institute at the national level, it works in close cooperation with the National Services Scheme (a university and college based student volunteer programme), and the Nehru Yuva Kendra Sangathan (the largest identified grassroots level youth organisation in the world), and other youth organizations in the implementation of training programmes. The Institute is a nodal agency for training youth as a facilitator of youth development activities in rural, urban as also tribal areas.

C. Background to the Conference

Sustainability as an agenda for youth development

The initial interpretation of the word 'Sustainability', as an attempt to close the gap between development and nature, has broadened in the present context to embrace all aspects of development. The journey from Brundtland commission to 'Agenda 2030' has been remarkable as it resulted in all nations accommodating sustainable development in the national development agenda. Yet the journey so far has been filled with challenges such as unaccomplished/ partially accomplished targets, stressful ecosystem and looming climate change. This challenge creates a pressure on development experts to broaden the concept of development and accommodate more innovative ways of addressing developmental issues. It has been a proven fact that sustainable development requires dialogues among all stakeholders and the dialogue needs to be positioned from the premise of intrinsic values. The signposts/milestones to development need to be identified from the people who are denied the opportunity to realise the benefits of development. The Agenda 2030 is a step forward in this direction and the success in achieving SDGs largely depend on how young people in the world embrace the concept of sustainable development.

The youth of today are the change agents of a more developed, better world and they will be the leaders of tomorrow. The United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) look at the young persons over the world to participate in leading the change. SDGs represent a collective best vision for the future – a vision that promises the generations a safe, hospitable planet, on which every person has the chance for a prosperous and peaceful life. Providing the youth with the expertise and institutional knowledge to carry out the plan we've built to sustain our planet through 2030 is the need of the hour. For the reason that the youth today will also bear the consequences of any inaction, it is imperative that they become the flagbearers for achieving the SDGs as they have the biggest stake in their success.

The pivotal role played by the youth in achieving the SDGs is evident from the fact that almost all the 169 targets, directly or indirectly, influence the youth specific goals and their importance in pushing the agenda towards 2030. To achieve this, youth mainstreaming requires an institutionalized focus. In addition, youth mainstreaming principles need to be incorporated as an important agenda in policy documents. This will result in achieving social equality, addressing the concerns of equality and justice.
